About the author

Jim Thomas, wdx0fbu, Miliken, Colorado. Jim is an avid dxer of FM radio stations and continues to pursue fm radio reception beyond the US, Canada, and México. In 1972, at the age of 15, the author experienced his first FM dx experiences and was suddenly hooked on the hobby. In 2000, Jim realized there was no 'definitive' guide to Mexican FM radio stations in print, and in 2001, introduced 'The Mexican FM Radio Directory'. With his continuing interest in radio stations from México, Central America, and the Caribbean, these publishing efforts have grown into 'Emisoras de FM', which maps and lists ALL FM stations in those regions. When he has time, Jim tunes the FM dial with a Sony XDR-F1HD receiver and an APS 13-element FM antenna. Jim has been married since 1977. He is the owner of Old West Graphics, a design and graphics installation company for the fleet vehicle industry. His only other hobby is organic gardening.

Consultants and Contributors for this Edition

Christopher Dunne, Pembroke Pines, Florida.

Chris was born on May 6, 1959. He is a high school graduate, and currently works for the United States Postal Service. Chris professes to be a Christian since 1978. He resides in South Florida, but spent two years in Alaska in the United States Air Force. FM & TV DX were really nonexistent there, but as an AM & Shortwave dxer, Chris says, "woo boy!" Chris was married for the first time in April 2008, to the lovely Elizabeth.

Glenn Hauser, Stillwater, Oklahoma.

Since 'retiring' from public radio in 1984, Glenn Hauser has spent much of his time compiling shortwave and other media news for his freely available DX Listening Digest/Review of International Broadcasting, and his weekly broadcast on shortwave and other stations, World of Radio. See <http://www.worldofradio.com> He also has a strong interest in Romance languages, Latin America and FM DXing, although from Oklahoma little beyond Mexico can be heard.

Randy Zerr, Fort Walton Beach, Florida.

Randy, born October 1966, has been an amateur radio operator for 21 years, holding the callsign KW4RZ. He has been dxing for 22 years and is active in FM, TV, and VHF amateur radio. In his DX shack you'll find a Denon TU1500RD tuner and a Sony XDR-F1HD receiver. He uses a log periodic antenna on a rotor and works very hard to document his dx pursuits, with the use of computer audio recording software. Randy notes that he has logged 2400 FM broadcast stations in the last 4 years. Randy is also a member of the WTFDA. He is employed in aerospace electronics.

Saul has been dxing AM, FM, and TV since the mid-1970s, from sites in and around Toronto and south-central Ontario. He is a member of two clubs that address FM DXing - WTFDA and ODXA. He has never received any countries outside Canada and U.S. except for Bermuda, on FM. On TV, he has received Cuba. Saul works as a freelance journalist, writer and editor, specializing in environmental issues.

Author of 44 books (41 published to date including 'Television's Pirates: Hiding behind your TV screen' from 1961 to date. TV and FM DXer from 1950 onward. His proudest DX moment? Identifying/logging more than a dozen high band and UHF TV channels from New England and Atlantic coast while living in Caribbean (Turks & Caicos islands); 1300-1500 miles plus Resident of New Zealand from 1990 where our family operates a trio of FM radio stations and the country's sole cable TV system. THE SINGLE FACTOR attracting most FM DXing enthusiasts to the hobby is the relatively limited coverage (distance) provided by a typical station. There are three factors involved in long distance reception - (1) The power of the station, (2) the height of the station's transmitting antenna, and perhaps the most important of all - (3) the care and precision the DXing enthusiast puts into the search for distant stations.

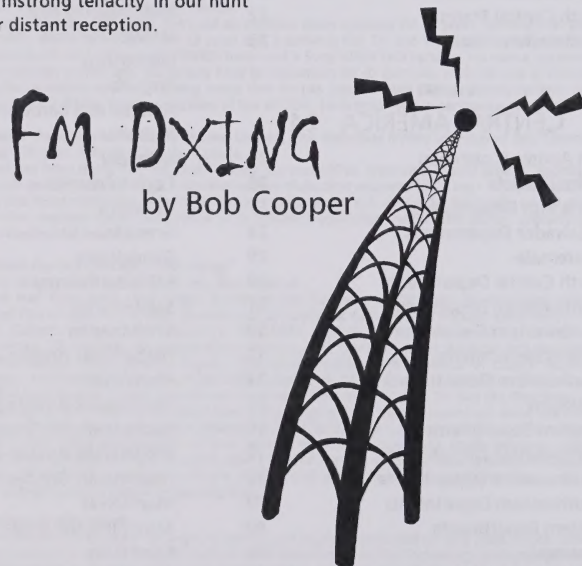

The original FM (Frequency Modulation) originated in the mid 30s and was considered an experimental service with temporary permission to 'test' in the region between 40 and 50 MHz. Coincidentally, in the same period of technology development, the first all-electronic (as opposed to mechanical) television was in a similar developmental phase. There were conflicts between the two new creations until the end of World War Two as both were desirous of permanently using the same general frequency band - 40 megacycles (today megahertz) upward to approximately 100. As late as 1942, any frequency above 80 was considered unreliable and difficult to use because the technology required was not yet developed.

FM had two births; the first which allowed several hundred stations to be licensed in the 42-50 MHz band prior to WW2 and the second when in 1946 FM was permanently reassigned to the 100 MHz region. The last of the (fully licensed) 42-50 MHz stations signed off in 1948 but the restart in the 100 MHz region was significantly hampered by a nation focusing on the newly available TV service and a FCC that relaxed rules for new AM (540-1600 kHz) stations - prior to the late 40s the rules pretty much stymied new AM station development.

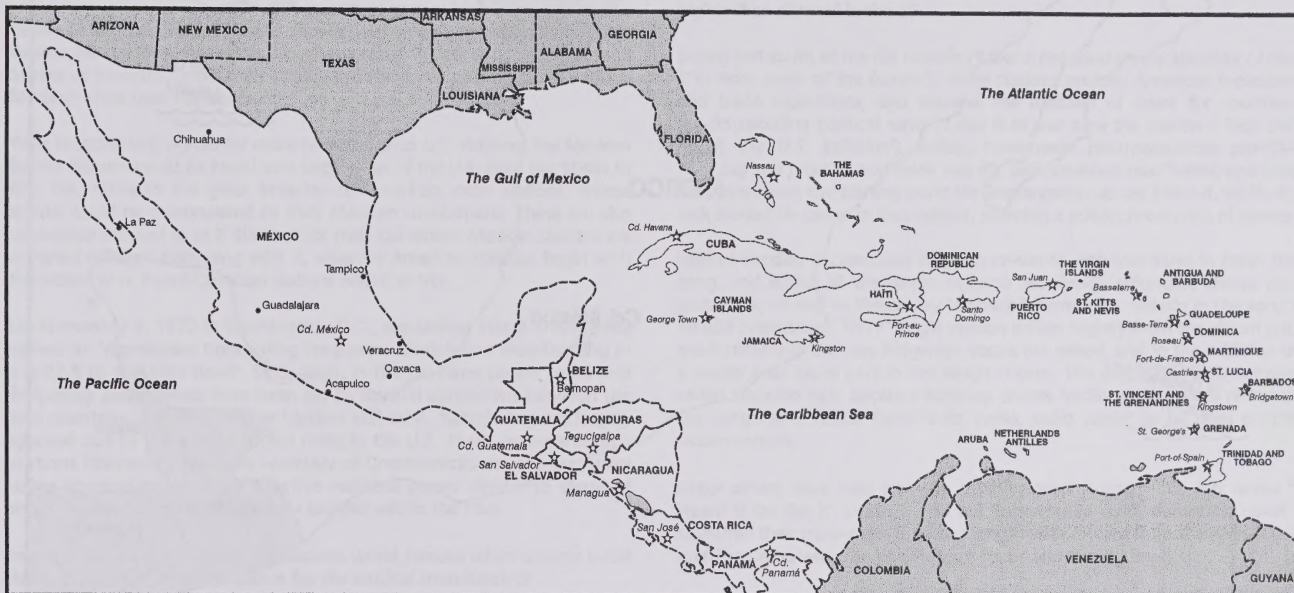

FM's natural qualities caused it as a modulation format to be adopted for the transmission of TV sound - a 1940 decision and we can all be grateful happened as British experience with AM sound for TV would later prove to be a disaster. But FM's real growth would not happen until well into the 1960s and 1970s and then largely because American car makers began to include FM (later FM stereo) receivers in vehicles.

This writer recalls with fondness experiencing FM 'DX' reception as a 12 year old in 1950; a simple crossed dipole chimney mounted antenna on the 'wrong side' of a hill in Ithaca (New York) produced frequent reception on what were in those days essentially 'clear channels' from stations 300 to 400 miles away. The developer of FM, Major Armstrong, was perhaps the original FM DXer. When his experimental station operating from just outside

New York City was operating (42.5 MHz) he sent a crew with suitable FM receivers and antennas to Alabama and then Iowa to record his own station's reception at distances approaching 900 miles. It was his 'discovery' of meteorite ionization (MS in our hobby today) that attracted significant interest (not all of it positive; many found his reports 'unbelievable') and he only convinced doubters after producing chart recordings of signal strength received backed up by actual (vinyl) transcriptions of the received audio. He might have been a bit incorrect when he summarized "Over a year solid reception at [xxx] miles appears to be possible up to ten percent of the time." But note this was when the station was in the 40-50 MHz region - and he later admitted "ten percent of the time" would be the accumulation of ten seconds here, a minute there and so on 24 hours a day. Modern FM DXing is a technical challenge Major Armstrong could but fantasize as is, for us, his results in the 30s and 40s. But we are proud inheritors of his passion for 'distance in FM' and each of us possesses at least a small amount of 'Armstrong tenacity' in our hunt for distant reception.

The Border Blasters. The Story of X Radio

-from the Wikipedia Research Division

A border blaster is a licensed commercial radio station that transmits at very high power from one nation to another. Border Blasters should not be confused with international broadcast stations. The term is perhaps most widely used in the United States of America to describe radio stations broadcasting from various Mexican cities near the border.

With broadcasting signals far more powerful than U.S. stations, the Mexican Border Blasters could be heard over large areas of the U.S. from the 1940s to the '70s, often to the great irritation of American radio stations, whose signals could be overpowered by their Mexican counterparts. These are also sometimes referred to as X Stations for their call letters: Mexican stations are assigned callsigns beginning with X, whereas American stations begin with the letters W or K and Canadian stations with C or VO.

On November 9, 1972 in Washington, D.C., the United States and Mexico signed an "Agreement Concerning Frequency Modulation Broadcasting in the 87.5 to 108 Mhz Band". Since then, in the FM band power levels and frequency assignments have been set by mutual agreement between the two countries. AM radio border-blasters still exist, though they are largely ignored due to the decline of AM radio in the U.S. There are several such stations licensed by Mexico's Secretary of Communications and Transport using transmitters with an effective radiated power similar to those of major licensed commercial stations located within the USA.

In 1973 the border blaster XERB became world famous when George Lucas featured the station as the source for the musical soundtrack of his motion picture American Graffiti.

"Mexican Radio" is a song written and performed by the band Wall of Voodoo, and produced by Richard Mazda. The track was initially made commercially available on their 1982 album Call of the West.

The song gained notoriety for its line sung and written by lead vocalist Stan Ridgway, "I wish I was in Tijuana / eating barbecued iguana." A video on MTV in 1982-83 helped as well.

Wall of Voodoo vocalist Stan Ridgway and guitarist Marc Moreland traced the inspiration for the song to listening to high-wattage unregulated AM border-blaster Mexican radio stations (among them XERF, XEG, and XERB) which, starting circa the 1930s, were received practically around the globe ("I turn the switch and check the number / I leave it on when in bed / slumber"). Some of the stations boasted a million watts, which was 20 times higher than allowed in the US.

Sitting just south of the Rio Grande ("I feel a hot wind on my shoulder / I dial it in from south of the border"), these stations avoided American broadcast and trade regulations, and became the medium of favor for countless quacks spouting political rants ("I dial it in and tune the station / They talk about the U.S. inflation"), selling homemade pharmaceuticals pre-FDA ("... I buy the product and never use it"), self-published manifestos, and may have even been the starting point for Televangelism as we know it. Wolfman Jack started his career in that market, spinning a schizophrenic mix of genres

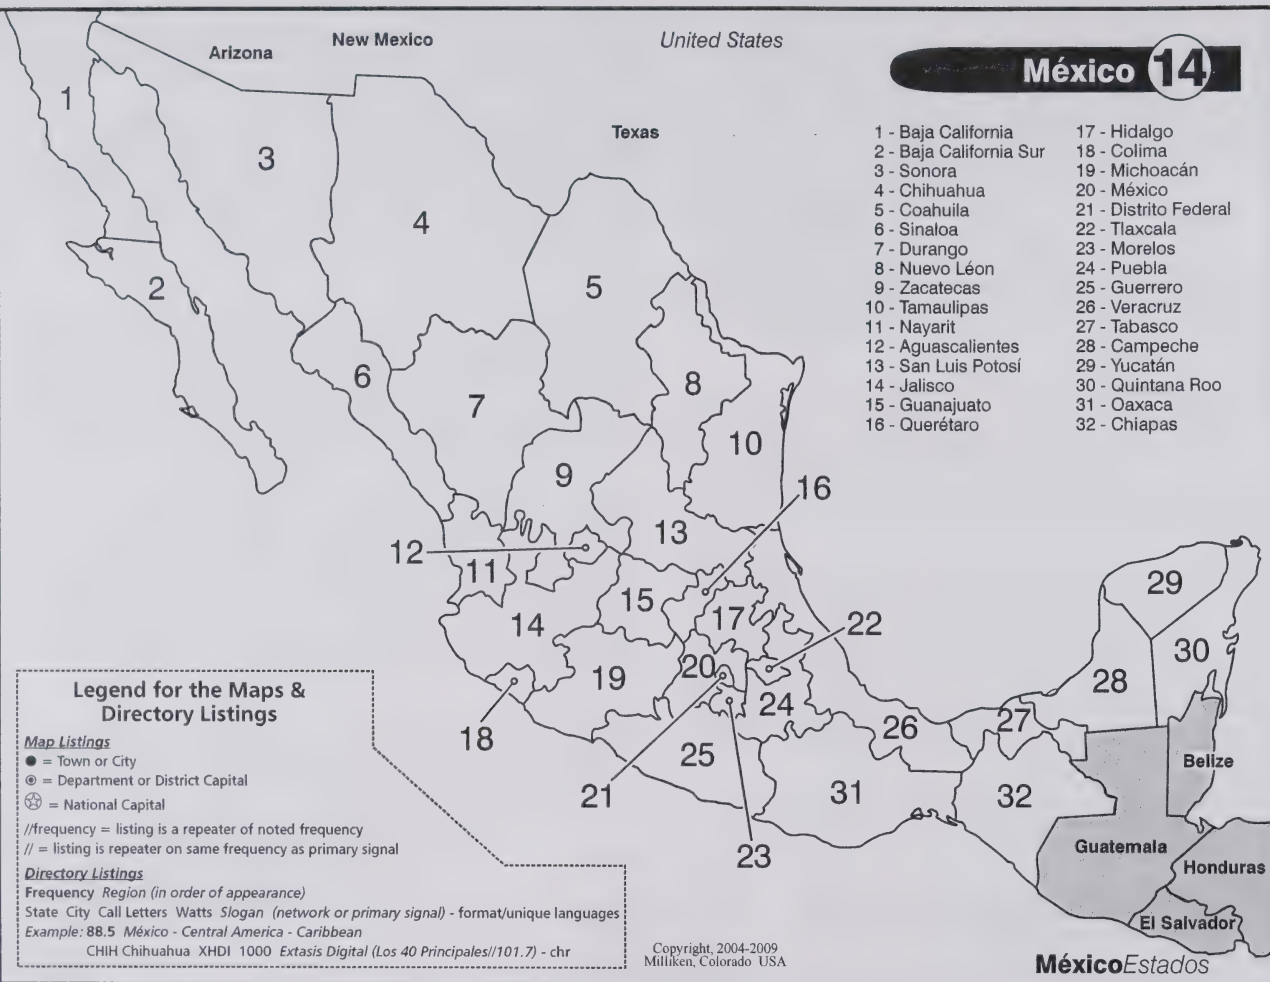

Wall of Voodoo vocalist Stan Ridgway co-wrote with Moreland to finish the song, and added all the verse's lyrics to Moreland's enigmatic chorus and guitar lick, as well as the catchy "mariachi" harmonica melody in the song's middle breakdown. The 7" single version differs slightly from the album cut, most notably in the way Ridgway's vocals are mixed, and in the addition of a louder bass drum part in the song's chorus. The single mix is sometimes called the oleo mix, because Ridgway chants "radio, radio, oleo, radio" at the song's end, rather than "radio, radio, radio, radio" as he does on the album version.

Other artists have paid homage to the border blaster - ZZ Top wrote "Heard It On the X" in 1975, and Los Super Seven (with numerous guests) stretched their tribute out to album length with, "Heard It on the X" in 2005 and The Doors with The WASP (Texas Radio and the Big Beat).

Guatemalan Radio Project. American Idol threatens Mayan culture.

—from the non-profit organization, Cultural Survival

The Guatemalan army couldn't wipe out Mayan culture, but American Idol could. The indigenous peoples of Guatemala have kept their culture through 500 years of colonization, brutal repression, and, most recently, 36 years of genocide that killed 200,000 Maya. But where brute force failed, globalization is succeeding. Mainstream Western entertainment is now flooding Guatemala's airwaves, hammering home the 24-hour-a-day message that Mayans should abandon their languages, their clothing, their spirituality, and their identities. And the only thing holding back this tidal wave of homogeneity is a network of tiny 500-watt radio stations.

Cultural Survival is partnering with Guatemalan non-governmental organizations to strengthen this network of 140 community radio stations across the country, many of which broadcast in one or more of the country's 23 indigenous languages. The stations provide news, educational programming, health information, and traditional music, all reinforcing pride in Mayan heritage. We provide the equipment and organizational expertise; they provide the people and the passion. And it's working: languages on the brink of extinction have come back into common use; marimba music that was being replaced with top-40 songs is being played again; and people are wearing the distinctive 'traje' that defines where they come from and who they are. But the job has only begun. A loophole in Guatemalan laws allows the police to shut down stations and confiscate equipment, and they are doing this with increasing frequency. We need your help to shore up this fragile network of protection for Mayan communities and cultures.

Cultural Survival was founded in response to the opening up of the Amazonian and South American hinterlands during the 1960s, and the drastic effects this had on indigenous inhabitants. It has since worked with indigenous communities in Asia, Africa, South America, North America, and Australia, becoming the leading US-based organization defending the rights of indigenous peoples around the world. Our efforts are guided by a board of directors that includes some of the world's preeminent indigenous leaders, as well as anthropologists, philanthropists, and entrepreneurs, and our executive director is a renowned human rights lawyer. Headquartered in Cambridge, Massachusetts, Cultural Survival has a satellite office for our Guatemala Radio Project in Guatemala and one for our Native Language Revitalization Campaign on the Wind River Reservation in Wyoming. Cultural Survival has received a four-star rating from Charity Navigator for outstanding fiscal responsibility.

The most important member of our team is you. None of our work would be possible without our members. Please become a member today.

"Without the partnership of Cultural Survival, the community radio movement in Guatemala would probably have ceased to exist over the past year."

—Francisco Macu, president of the Guatemala Indigenous Radio Network

"Before we started the radio station in Palin eight years ago, our language, Pocomam, was only spoken in our homes. Now Pocomam is spoken everywhere—in offices, in the streets. Without community radio, we might have lost our native tongue." —Cesar Gomez, GRP Coordinator

"[The audience] loves the [health] programming. It puts health into the hands of the people." —A community radio volunteer for La Ninca FM

"The people love it so much! Almost 20 percent of them cultivate coffee, so the program is very useful. The majority of the people use chemical products because they are quicker, and because the farmers have no confidence in organic products. But they like the radio program and always listen to it, so now they want to try other forms of products in the future, especially organic products."

—A community radio volunteer at Radio Ixchel

An example would be:
89.1 TIYA (+3 R) = 89.1 TIYA (primary) + 3 low power repeater stations also on 89.1. Low power repeater stations are generally 250 watts or less.

85th Anniversary of Cuban Radio. A Story to Tell. -by Mayra Cue Sierra

The celebration of the 85th anniversary

Of Cuban Radio – marked by the opening of the first radio station, 2LC, founded by Luis Casas Romero and his family - can not disregard the appearance of CMX broadcasting on 1010 kHz, also known as the 'Radio Station of the People', since its birth was due to a collaboration of talented workers that made the station possible.

Competing against a large network of commercial radio stations, '1010' emerged in the 1940's as the "the Voice of the Communists in Cuba", who managed also to have a newspaper called "Hoy". In terms of access of the leftwing sector to the mass media, this set an important precedent, in a society ruled by rather different viewpoints.

To say and write this is easy, but we should remember that the financing of both the radio station and the newspaper was possible, thanks to the supporters of the station. The money was raised cent by cent with the support of the lower and middle classes; workers and members of the People's Socialist Party, the communists and their sympathizers. These folks became the main donors of these projects, amid the difficult situation that characterized the World War II period on the island.

Gladys Zurbano Lanza, Cuban actress and radio announcer remembers: "I was 12 years old when I was introduced to Paco Alfonso, director of the theatrical group that performed in Havana's tents. Right away I was admitted as part of the cast. Amador Domínguez, who married me later, was also one of the actors. These presentations were intended to collect money to pay the staff members of "Hoy" and the radio station '1010'."

Although the communists could not hold the control of the radio station for long, it played an important role in the political campaign at that time, defending the cause of the poor, and denouncing the prevailing "status quo". However, the artistic and cultural importance of '1010' gets lost in the shadows of the collective memory.

Without being paid a cent, the best dramatic artists and musicians voluntarily performed before its microphones in the early stage of radio. Finally, they got small fee payments, given that CMX received no profits from the ads, as other radio stations did.

The generosity and solidarity shown by Raquel Revuelta Planas, a star of the national theatre and radio is a legend nowadays. Month after month she donated a good part of her income to the Party's projects. That's why it is not strange that she worked as an actress and announcer at '1010'.

Many of these actors and actresses also held key positions in the most prestigious radio stations of that period (RHC Cadena Azul and CMQ Radio), that in spite of being aware of their political leanings, let them participate in their programming. In the 1950's others reached national and international celebrity status, working for radio, television and cinema.

In an unfinished list, you may find names that bet on Cuba after the triumph of the Revolution, and others who decided to emigrate.

Ibrahim Urbino, then married with singer Olga Guillot, acted as General and Artistic Director. Both afforded their talents to these radio stations, supported by Sergio Nicols and other comrades.

'1010' brought together 18-karat gold professionals, and if you question it, read the following talent list to see how the communists of yesteryear appreciated the culture and the mass media.

Scriptwriter: Marcos Behmaras and Félix Pita Rodríguez, eminent writers of dramatic, humorous and adventure radio serials for the RHC Cadena Azul and CMQ Radio.

There were also a group of actors and actresses that expanded the Cuban culture. A glory of the national drama was Paco Alfonso, who founded the Teatro Popular (People's Theatre), the first sound project of the community theatre in Cuba, featuring a national and international repertoire. He also was actor and stage director, and assumed the conduction of comedy programs on '1010'.

The cast was formed by Amador Domínguez; Eduardo Egea; Enrique Alzugaray; Paul Díaz; Luis López Puente; Santiago García Ortega; Elvira Cervera; Raquel Revuelta Planas; Gladys Zurbano Lanza; Antonia Valdés; Magda Iturriz; Nenita Viera; Estrellita Palacio. The voice that identified the radio station was that of Bellita Borges, leading actress and announcer. Among the latter ones we can mention Juan González Ramos, founder of Channel 4, Union Radio TV.

There were musicians, such as pianists, composers, arrangers and orchestras' conductors like Félix Guerrero, Enrique González Mantiñi, Adolfo Guzmán, Facundo Rivero, and Telma Norton, pianist and actress.

There were singers like Elena Burke & César Portillo de la Luz; those stars created a unique Cuban musical genre, loosely translated, is known as the "feeling".

Once WWII came to an end, Ramón Grau San Martín's administration (1944-1948) began an anticommunist offensive, intended to silence the mass media and also to eliminate the leaders of the Central de Trabajadores de Cuba (Cuba's Workers Federation), then headed by Lázaro Peña.

'1010' did not continue broadcasting, however, when many have forgotten other former radio stations in Havana, the 'Radio Station of the People' is in the memory of Cubans as the nation celebrates the 85th birthday of Cuban Radio during 2009.

Call Letter Assignment Changes

There was a big change with call letter assignments in the Dominican Republic in late 2007 and is just now beginning to take effect. Indotai, the licensing authority in the Dominican Republic, has reassigned the three and four letter identifications with three letters, followed by two numerals. Broadcasters are not required to use them in their station identification, as most are officially recognized by their station name. Many stations continue to use their old four letter calls in their identifications, but are expected to eventually drop the use of their old call letters. The new calls are used on the map, however, below is an example of how this appears in the listings. If the station is a new assignment, then only the new calls appear.

Music Formats in México, Central America and the Caribbean islands.

General Information

Spanish language radio programming formats include every mainstream format found in any major city in the US. In addition, unique formats to Mexican, Central American and Caribbean radio programming are listed below. Every effort has been made to verify programming on every listed radio station. However, since there is a great deal of 'missing' information in even Central American OFFICIAL radio lists, those listings whose programming is in question are simply listed as 'variety'. The following format descriptions reflect only those which have a larger audience. Other program formats are mentioned briefly in closing.

Adult Contemporary

A composition of any combination of the following formats: Romántica, Ballads, International Pop Hits and Top 40 Hits.

- ✍ Romántica and Balada - This is an easy listening format that by nature consists of ballads and romantic, poetic love songs.
- ✍ International Pop Hits - This format is a melting pot of Latin American, European, and Caribbean music. The appeal of this format comes from its receiving international airplay.
- ✍ Top 40 Hits - This format features popular groups and performers from all categories with current single hit releases.

Regional

The Regional format is made up of different types of music from Mexico. Regional is a mix of the following musical styles: Banda, Ranchera, Mariachi and Norteña.

- ✍ Banda - This format consists of music from groups or "conjuntos" that play the "Regional" Mexican music.
- ✍ Ranchera - Due to its traditional folkloric sound, Ranchera music is popular throughout Mexico and has become a symbol of the entire country. Ranchera usually features guitars and horns. It is extremely popular throughout the Northern region of Mexico ("El Norte"). It is considered indigenous to Mexicans who have lived in country (pueblo) towns.
- ✍ Mariachi - This folkloric music originated in Mexico. Mariachi usually features guitars and horns. Mariachi is similar to Ranchera and Norteña.

- ✍ Norteña - Meaning "Northern", this music is representative of Northern Mexico. It is similar to the Polka, but has a defined Mexican flavor. Norteña music most always features an accordion. Norteña is very popular among Mexicans living in the U.S., many of these immigrants have emigrated from Northern Mexico. Moreover, Norteña is regionalized music, similar to Country and Western music from Nashville. It has Mariachi overtones and it is also the base for Ranchera music.

Tropical

Tropical indicates a "Latin beat" music format from the Caribbean. The Tropical format includes the following styles: Salsa, Merengue, Cumbia and Reggaeton.

- ✍ Salsa - Its Latin beat is synonymous with a Caribbean/Cha-Cha type sound. Artists such as Tito Puente, Willie Colon and Celia Cruz made this musical style popular in Latin America and New York. Salsa combines Latin Caribbean rhythms with jazz and is contemporary and very danceable. Today it symbolizes music popular in Puerto Rico, Cuba, Dominican Republic and Colombia.
- ✍ Merengue - A style of music that originates from the Spanish Caribbean. The music is a Cha-Cha in nature, but has a slight variation in steps. It is very danceable and appeals to a wide spectrum of the Latin Caribbean audience.
- ✍ Cumbia - Cumbia is of Colombian origin and is popular in the Caribbean and South America. Lately it is becoming popular in Mexico and Central America. The music is Cuban-Caribbean making it heavy on the drum beat and very danceable. Today it symbolizes music popular in Puerto Rico, Cuba, the Dominican Republic and Colombia.
- ✍ Reggaeton - Reggaeton is a relatively new style of dance music that began in Puerto Rico and derived from a blend of Latin tropical sounds, Jamaica's reggae music and urban hip-hop.

Tejano

Originated in Texas (Tejas), this music is performed by Tex-Mex/Chicano groups (conjuntos). It is a cross between contemporary Rock/Ranchera/Country. The lyrics can be both Spanish and English. This music appeals to a cross section.

Hip-Hop

The Hip-Hop music culture was spawned in urban America, from the disco, funk, reggae and rap movements of the 1970's and 1980's. Hip-Hop is one of the most influential cultures on the American landscape today as it reaches out to all segments of society from its urban roots.

Share Your Exotic DX Mp3 or Wav Files!

I want to hear your exotic fm dx!

Do you have some interesting fm dx that you've managed to record? Maybe you've recorded some foreign language fm radio stations that you're certain are from the tropics, but you just can't nail them down. I might be able to help. I won't claim to be fluent in Spanish, French, Dutch or forty other regional dialects from the Caribbean region. However, over 35 years of tuning the dial for exotic dx has taught me WHAT to listen for. It isn't necessary to speak another language fluently. What is necessary in identifying those distant foreign language signals is knowing the basics of the language and what particular words are going to help you in identifying who it is you've heard or are currently listening to.

If you've got something recorded that you'd like some help with in identifying, drop me a line at <mradiohead@wdemail.com> and let me know what it is before you send it. I'll gladly accept mp3's and wav files, but you must let me know you're sending it to me, otherwise, it will simply get deleted in the email INBOX.

Happy dxing!
